July 22, 2014

Dear Sadaf,

I hope this finds you well. I am writing to invite you to participate in a domestic global health observation trip to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) in Atlanta, Georgia August 21 through August 22, 2014. The focus of this trip is to be briefed by global health experts on the role of the CDC in global health and how CDC collaborates with key partners to CDC is a domestic and international leader and technical expert on health and health related issues, and works closely with the World Health Organization and other UN agencies to ensure that the U.S. and the world are as healthy as possible. WHO serves as a coordinating authority on international public health and is responsible for leading the global response to health emergencies, monitoring outbreaks of infectious disease, spearheading global vaccination efforts, and developing campaigns to combat life threatening diseases like polio, malaria, and HIV/AIDS. Every year, the WHO investigates 200 to 250 disease outbreaks. CDC works very closely with WHO on these issues, ensuring that American interests are promoted abroad and American's health is protected at home.

We would like to invite you to participate in this trip to allow you to learn from technical and policy experts at the CDC on exactly how CDC and WHO work together. This observation trip will include briefings on CDC/WHO collaboration on a range of health issues, including HIV/AIDS, global immunizations, food borne illnesses, and emerging infectious diseases. This trip will also include tours of key CDC disease detection and prevention sites, laboratories and operations centers.

As host, we will cover all expenses for this trip according to the rules set by the Committee on Ethics.

Sincerely yours,

Peter Yeo
Vice President of Public Policy
